Philadelphia.

March 10. 1865.

My dear Friend.

Your letter reached me last evening - as you see I am quite as prompt as you - in replying.

I imagine you have found your letter answered - with fully as much promptness as you could desire.

We ought to get on in our acquaintance rapidly - if it depends on our letters.

I feel value your promptness more than I know you were tried with the labor of the day - when you composed my letter. - Your laboring attempts were certainly sufficient in themselves - to make you forgetful of the pleasures of absent friends. - I sympathize with you in this necessary task - for I. & I am supposed to be known at home with the needle than you - feel it no agreeable task to keep my Father's - several Brothers' mistakes in a presentable condition. I wish honestly that I could help you out of your difficulties in this line. but I suppose sympathy is but a poor substitute. For the aid I cannot give you. It might be somewhat improve. to make known your proficiency. for if you should get a wife - when you do take one - of an industrious tendency - & disposed to turn to "account" all available aid - your talent might be called into requisition.

The pain pours down upon us
- & has been for a number of days
- as tho' it would never cease. Don't you think "a happy amiability - never to allow storm & clouds to effect the spirits". It is when one thinks of it - such a foolish weakness. & yet one
- that at times I am not altogether free from. It belongs almost entirely to indolence. I believe - & therefore the more discreditable.

So you are going to take a vacation.

- I think you desire it well - & wish you every pleasure - I wish Philadelphia were in Illinois - or at least not so far off as it is - from your starting-point.
I should insert a ~~but~~ hopeful suggestion - concerning your route - Perhaps you could imagine what it might be.

My "confidential" little friend has left me - been gone two days - Having been with me for nearly three months
- you may imagine I feel very lonely - & scarcely know how to pass the days - without my little "shadow".

My main waiting correspondents will perhaps congratulate themselves on her absence - as I have devoted myself to the bundle of unanswered letters - & like marked progress ^{with} them -

But you have had no cause to complain - so you must sympathize with my loss - & write me a good long letter to comfort me - & comen-sate for my loss - I am doubtful
- whether this will reach you - before you take your "leave of absence" - Still I remember. "Commanding Generals" never do things in haste. & you may be compelled to exercise more patience than I think.

Your photograph occupies an enviable position in my Album. vis-avis with ~~the~~ prettiest face in the book. You could ask no more for it. could you - & I am sure if you knew the lady personally, you would appreciate even more the honor conferred. - for she is as sweet as she is pretty. - The "Union" sentiment is not as strongly developed, as I might wish. but she is open to argument on that subject, as nearly all the ladies are said to be. - Following your example in not apologizing for what I am inclined to fear is an uninteresting letter. I remain Ever

Your sincere friend
Gutic.
